Todd & Dale, the Newest Political Mavericks, are “Running 4 President™” in 2012

LAS VEGAS, Nevada, November 5, 2008 – “You want mavericks?” says local filmmaker Marko Sakren, “We’ve got mavericks. Todd and Dale, the two leading characters in our upcoming “Running 4 President” feature film (www.R4Pmovie.com), are the newest political mavericks!” Who says you need experience to be President of the United States? Oh, and judgment? Come on. Child’s play. Leave it up to these two slackers to come up with a hair-brained scheme to save their AirHedz Oxygen Bar™ and look what happens: a comedy of errors that ends up defining who will be the next resident of the White House (in our imagination, that is). Does that person have character, you ask? Well, hold on to your bootstraps because there are a whole bunch of characters in “Running 4 President” - a comedy about politics unusual. “It’ll strike the funny bone,” Sakren comments, “especially after such a stressfully suspenseful election season (in the real world). Laughter is good medicine and we’re looking to spread a dose of good cheer through our film efforts.”

Todd and Dale are certainly agents of change, albeit unlikely ones, because they are forced into making a difference in the world by their demanding electorate. So, in the wake of one of the most transformative presidential elections in history (in the real world), the producers of “Running 4 President” have taken their lead characters and the spirit of their movie to the streets with a four-year-long Mavericks-in-the-White-House Contest for anyone interested in running for president in 2012. Whether you are pleased with the real election results or not, it’s a great time to join the discussion about the future of America. If you’re excited about the results, it’s time you step up to the plate and lend your own “maverick” qualities toward the changes ahead. If you’re one of the disenchanteds, it’s the perfect time now to start “Running 4 President” for 2012 as your own kind of candidate. Either way, those who jump into this imaginary 2012 race for the White House by December 1, 2008, will get a chance to appear in the upcoming feature film “Running 4 President” produced by Teri Dukas and Matt Kautsky and starring local Las Vegas actors Griffin Stanton-Ameisen (who plays Todd), John E. Carson (who plays Dale), Carole J. Hannon, J.D. Smith, Liana Alexandra and Sergio Garcia. Local filmmaker Marko Sakren is Executive Producer and Director. The 95-minute film premieres in 2009 in Las Vegas, Nevada. Details coming next.
